

HEAVY VOTE OUT
IN PHILADELPHIA
PRIMARY ELECTION

Citizenry Begins Trek to Polls
During Early Morning Hours

1/2 MILLION REGISTERED

Contest is Between Two Factions of the Republican Organizations

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—(INS)— Despite gloowering skies and occasional showers shortly after the balloting began at 8 a. m. today Philadelphia citizenry, "Organization" and otherwise, began trooping to the polls today in droves, following the bitterest primary election campaign in 30 years.

Full half a million voters' names were on the registration books and of this number 400,000 are expected to cast their ballots some time before the voting ceases at 8 p. m. tonight.
Strangely enough the contest is not between the Republicans and the few handful Democrats that boast of Philadelphia as their home but between two factions of the G. O. P.—"Organization" or Senator-elect William S.
Vare's followers, and Mayor Harry A.
Mackey's followers or the Republican League group.

Elected to the mayoralty by the Vare group for which he formerly served as campaign manager, Mackey refused to accept the "Organization" slate for the primary and boosting John F. Dugan for the Register of Wills post named three other nominees for the county offices agreeing only with him.

HULMEVILLE MAN IS ACQUITTED OF CHARGE

George Smith is Found Not Guilty of Assaulting Wife

NO COURT HELD TODAY

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 17.—The second week of criminal court opened yesterday. There is no court today owing to the primary election.

George Smith, of Hulmeville, charged with aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery by his wife, Margaret Smith, a former Miss Mitch, of Hulmeville, was acquitted yesterday but directed to pay the costs. The woman charged that her husband knocked her down and kicked her when he was drunk on August 4th near the entrance to Hulmeville Park. Defense witnesses denied that Smith was drunk or that he struck his wife.

Frank Kentopp, of Doylestown, charged with the larceny of $110 from his brother, William, on August 9th, was convicted yesterday by a jury. Kentopp was released under bond pending the disposal of a motion for a new trial. Kentopp's defense was that although he did take the money, he did not know what he was doing at the time; that he was "dead drunk" and had been drinking for a week previous to the theft. Two prominent Doylestown business men testified that Kentopp's reputation for honesty had never been questioned so far as they knew.

Harry Crook Lee, fifteen, of New Hope, pleaded guilty in juvenile court to a charge of displaying another's operator's license when arrested by a State Highway Patrolman. Judge Keller suspended sentence and placed the boy on probation for a period of one year. The boy's father, Harry Church Lee, was charged with allowing an unlicensed driver to drive a car and lending operator's license to person not entitled thereto. The father was acquitted by a jury but was directed to pay the costs.

Young Lee changed his story on the witness stand yesterday from that told before Justice of the Peace W. Carlile Hobensack after his arrest, in the presence of his father. At the hearing young Lee admitted that he drove the car and secured the license from his father. Yesterday in court, as a witness for his father, the boy told the jury that his first story was "a lie," that he did not know why he said it, but that he meant to say that his father knew nothing about him driving the car.

Judge Keller warned both the father, who is a chauffeur for a New Hope woman, and the boy, to be careful about telling the truth in the future. Edward Connell, forty-three, of Philadelphia, a truck driver, pleaded guilty before Judge Keller yesterday to a charge of operating a car while drunk. He was fined $200 and costs. Connell had no accident. He told the Court that he had taken a drink of "hard cider" and was arrested near Quakertown.

Giebel's Condition Is Reported As Unchanged

Condition of John Giebel, 65-year old farm hand of Bensalem Township, who slashed his throat with a razor Sunday night, is reported as little changed at the Harriman Hospital today.

Giebel, who according to his own statement had spent several days drinking, was found with his windpipe severed, the razor just missing the jugular vein, by his employer, William White, early yesterday morning.

The man was taken to the local institution for treatment, where his condition is considered serious.

The farm-hand told physicians that he had been brooding over the condition of his wife who some years ago was placed in an insane asylum, but stated he did not intend to commit suicide and did not realize what he was doing.

J. C. T. U. CONVENES IN ANNUAL SESSION IN TREVOSE METHODIST CHURCH --- SIXTEEN OF THE EIGHTEEN UNIONS WERE REPRESENTED

Interesting Meeting Held at Which Reports of Year's Work
Were Received --- Over 125 Members Were in Attendance --- Work Has Made Much Progress

TREVOSE, Sept. 17.—The Bucks County Women's Christian Temperance Union held their annual convention here Saturday in the Methodist Church.

Sixteen of the eighteen unions in the county were represented, bringing the attendance up to 125 and over.

The county president, Mrs. Jesse Harper, of Yardley, opened the convention. Devotionals were in charge of Rev. Davidson, pastor of the church.

Mrs. Minnie B. George, of Bensalem, welcomed the convention and Mrs. Van Doren, president of Southampton Union responded. The response included a song, sung by Southampton members, the words having been written by one of their number.

The president told of her work during the year along legislative lines, reported having visited each union at least once and spoke in appreciation of the cooperation given her by the local unions.

It was voted to give $5 to Mrs. Ella M. George, retiring State president, as a love gift. Announcement was made of the Church and Bible School Exposition of Teaching Material and Methods to be held in Scottish Rites Hall, Philadelphia, the last of October and the first of November. The W. C. T. U. will have a booth at this exposition. This will be in charge of Philadelphia unions and the unions of the 4 nearby counties. Mrs. Emma Smith Woodman, secretary, read the minutes of last year's convention.

Miss Sara Twining gave the corresponding secretary's report, showing a great variety of interest on the part of the locals. Six locals, Yardley, Newtown, Wrightstown, Churchville, Warrington and Mafekfield, attained the Standard of Excellence and Bucks County achieved the Standard of Excellence as a county.

The treasurer's report showed the membership in the county to be 909, a gain of 64 over last year. Every union secured one new member as a memorial member for Mrs. George. Local unions had so far given $31 for Mrs. George love gift. Southampton was the only union to have trebled its membership, though 4 unions had made a 25% increase. Mrs. Harper set 1,000 members as the goal for this year's membership drive.

There are 11 School Loyal Temperance Legions, and 2 independent legions, together totaling 316 members.

Two unions, Mafekfield and Warrington, have organized Temperance Light Bearers groups among their youngest children.

The executive committee reported they had appointed Mrs. Myrtle Kester to replace Mrs. Maud E. R. Stuckert, resigned, in the department of "Legislation" and "Christian Citizenship." Miss Anna Heritage, of Morrisville, was appointed director in the department of moving pictures and Mrs. Stover, director of the Union Signal in the county. Both these directorates were formerly held by Mrs. Kester.

Mrs. Lavinia Hartley, of Newtown, told of the tree planted by the county W. C. T. U. for her aunt, Mrs. Lavinia Blackfan, last October, in the Friends Meeting House grounds, Newtown, of the impressive beauty of the exercises and of Mrs. Blackfan's deep appreciation.

RELIABLE ADVERTISEMENTS

Newspaper censorship of its own advertising columns was lauded by William E. Humphrey, of the Federal Trade Commission, who has expressed the belief that for success in its campaign against fraudulent and dishonest advertising the commission must depend largely upon the voluntary cooperation of the newspapers.

Virtually every American newspaper of prestige subscribes to the following creed:

"We are striving to have in this newspaper only advertising that has character, that is unobjectionable, that can be trusted, that readers can respond to with a feeling that there has been effort made to protect them from improper and useless expenditure of time and money."

Most newspapers take greater pride in the high quality of the advertising printed in their columns than in their volume of advertising. They are as jealous of the integrity of their advertising as of their news, and rightly so, for the newspaper of today is bought for its advertising as well as for its news and other departments.

While the Federal Trade Commission should not neglect this phase of competitive business methods, it has found little to object to and has little work cut out for it in this field in the future.

HELPING THE BUYER

Growing recognition of the fact that merchants can do much to assist their customers to buy more wisely is evident on the part of the better stores. It is a phase of merchandising in which the business man interests himself to the mutual advantage of both himself and his customer.

Many millions of dollars are spent annually by consumers for merchandise which does not properly meet their needs, an unsatisfactory condition for both consumers and stores. The remedy is mutual in nature. Consumers must fight shy of buying blindly, or without due consideration of the uses to which the goods are to be put. Stores, in turn, must provide an increasing amount of essential information and shape their buying and selling practices to aid the consumer constructively.

Perhaps the most significant thing leading stores are doing to protect their patrons and to guide them is that they are increasingly buying to specifications. They are also developing to a marked degree the function of the stylish and style consultant to insure that the merchandise sold is in both style and good taste.

Among the new comforts and conveniences which are making twentieth century life easier and happier is the modern way of shopping. The 1929 customer would no more tolerate the crude and unsatisfactory store methods of 20 years ago than he would accept medieval methods of transportation.

Anticipation is a part of the original process; realization is the discovery it has gone flat.

A hick town is a place where everybody knows who traded in the used car you bought.

Never look a gift horse in the mouth, or judge an American town by what you can see from the railroad.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR. Bobby Doyle, framed by Don Wilkes and his gang and sentenced to prison for twenty years for killing a policeman, is aided to escape from jail by his friend, Beebe Barrett. Beebe is assisted by Johnny the Hop, a dope fiend, who hides Bobby in a secret room in his apartment. The day after Bobby's return, Don Wilkes is visited in his apartment by an over-dressed woman, Beebe, who demands medical attention and money for Mike, one of the gang, who is laid up with a gunshot wound. He refuses the medical attention but gives her the money. Because of his love for Beebe and his jealousy for Bobby, he tells Inspector Wilnot and Riff Myers day after day, that Johnny has hidden Bobby. Johnny, arrested, deprived of his drug and put through the third degree, confesses. The police rush to Johnny's apartment and find Bobby's hiding place, only to discover that Bobby has been playing possum. As soon as the police satisfied that their quarry is dead, leave, he lets himself out of the window and hides in some bushes under his window. Just as two policemen rush into the yard—Now on on with the story.

CHAPTER XI.

ONE of them had a flashlight. He swept it around the yard in a wide sweep. Its revealing glow picked out dark objects, showed the fence clearly, the paths of dirt and drying grass. By scarcely an inch, it missed the ragged bushes behind which Bobby crouched.

"He ain't here," one of them muttered. "I tell you—he ran along the roof to the next house. Come on!"

"He's slick—made a fool of Riff. But Riff would never have got him anyway. If Don Wilkes hadn't tipped him off."

The other man muttered something else, but Bobby did not even hear. All the blood ran to his head at this sudden revelation. He knew now—oh, he saw everything now!

Don Wilkes—that was his enemy. Don Wilkes—the man who had framed him! He knew that now, without proof, with such clearness he wondered why he hadn't guessed it before.

He recalled the things Beebe had told him in her letters, about how kind Don had been, how generous and helpful. As if Don Wilkes had any kindness in him. He thought, and had planned everything out from the first.

Bobby ground his teeth together. If only he had the chance to live that long, to warn her, tell her the truth! If only he had the chance to throttle Dapper Don with his own hands!

He was recalled to his danger the next instant. "Come on," said one of the two officers. "Can't waste any more time here."

A Clever Ruse. "Wait till I have a look at those bushes!" the other muttered. "You missed those with that flash."

Bobby Doyle's fingers groped and found a loose rock. With all his might he flung it over the fence. It crashed into some loose boxes there. The two officers jumped and turned.

"Got him—there he is!" Bobby heard one of them shout.

They were gone. He rose to his feet, ran in through the open door, down a dark hallway. He saw a little crowd standing there, looking out upon the street. Bobby stole up to them, and stood watching, like another onlooker.

He saw Inspector Wilnot come out, back rapid orders, and the policemen who waited there moved down the street. Two minutes later, Bobby Doyle was on the opposite corner. A wild exultation was singing in his heart.

He knew who his enemy was at last. He knew by instinct where he would be now, offering false comfort in all likelihood. It was the most dangerous thing he could possibly do, but Bobby did not hesitate. He made his way with a grim look in his eyes toward Beebe Barrett's apartment.

They had heard the news already. Don with a change coming into his eyes under their heavy eyelids. Beebe with a gasp of dread and joy. Mary seemed like someone in coma. She scarcely seemed to realize that Bobby had escaped once more.

They returned to the apartment together. Don Wilkes had never been more gentle.

A Wild Despair. "You'll make yourself sick with all this," he said. "Try to pull yourself together, you poor kid!"

And all Beebe could say through her tight lips was, "He's got away! He's got away!" over and over.

When they returned to Beebe's room, Johnny the Hop had disappeared. Beebe could not sit down. She would go to the window, come back to the table, return to the window once more, while Don pleaded with her, begged her to keep a tight grip on herself. Mary, sunk into a chair, had closed her eyes as if to shut out the world. She seemed scarcely able to hear.

"Where do you suppose he is?" Beebe asked wildly. "He hasn't any money—no friends except you. Oh, I don't see how he can get away. But he's done so much—it was like a miracle. And God couldn't be cruel enough to take him from me!"

"It's you I'm worried about," Don murmured, moistening his dry lips. "You see, if anything should happen to Bobby—and we've got to expect the worst, Beebe—you've got to have someone to turn to. I—I want you to realize how I want to help you, take care of you. Beebe, you gotta listen to me—this isn't the time to tell you, but—"

Through the open windows there came a faint, familiar sound, the sound of an Italian organ grinder, playing last season's tunes.

A Sudden Appearance. Don Wilkes was listening. He went to the window, pulled out his handkerchief, saw Beebe watching him. There was a sudden knocking at the door. Beebe sprang to open it. She saw a woman with a haggard, unhappy face, a woman she had never seen before.

"Bess!" the racketeer exclaimed. "What's goin' on?"

She broke off with a curt gesture. "Joe said I'd find you here. I got something to tell you, Don Wilkes."

"I don't want to hear it," "You gotta hear it. Mike's dying—dying! On account of you. He's got the priest with him now."

"Listen," Wilkes broke out, in a white fury.

But she would not be halted. "He wants you, and you gotta go to him. Here's a note he sent."

"A note? What is it?" "How do I know. But he's dying, and he's gotta get it off his chest. That's all he said about it. Come on."

"I'll be right down," Don muttered after a pause. The woman gave him a steady look, then made her way from the room. "You see," Don explained to Beebe, "one of the boys was hurt. He's been sick a long time. I wouldn't go if I didn't have to. I want you to wait for me, because I'm coming right back. I've got a lot to say to you, Beebe. I'm the only one who can help you, you know."

He put his hand on the door knob. But this turned under his fingers. The door was jerked open. Bobby Doyle stood before them. "Oh, my God—Bobby!"

Mary had started to her feet. But Bobby for once looked at Beebe only briefly, and scarcely glanced at his sister. His eyes were focused on Dapper Don Wilkes.

"I thought I'd made a clean getaway," he said, breathing hard. "But a cop spotted me three blocks away. They're on my heels. I ain't got much time. But it's enough."

"Bobby, don't give up hope!" Don exclaimed. "I'm going to help you, kid."

The younger man's lips curled. "Yes, you are!" he said. He whirled around to Beebe. "Tell me one thing first—I want to know—and I got time enough for that, too. Has he made his play for you yet?"

"For me? What are you saying?" "Bobby's frozen smile was the only answer. He was looking at Wilkes again."

"You didn't get very far, did you?" he asked. "You were my pal and hers, were you? You double crossing, money dog, I was hiding tonight with the cops shooting up the town to get me when I heard two of 'em talking. One was telling the other that you gave Bill the tip that Johnny knew where I was. Then I saw the whole thing. I saw it was you who framed me in the first place. I never could figure out how he hated me enough to do that before. I saw why you did—you wanted Beebe, my girl. Do you understand now? Do you see that I've got the goods on you?"

Dapper Don had not moved. But his hand slid imperceptibly into his coat pocket.

LIVE where you work

Many people employed in Bristol are commuting to and from their work each day. This means an unnecessary expense and a waste of time. They must leave home earlier and return later than if they lived in the town where they are employed. They have less time for pleasure and less time to spend with their families than if they resided here.

Why commute?

Bristol as a place of residence offers every opportunity to be found in a large city. There are paved streets, sanitary sewers, good schools and churches of every denomination; periodic collection of ashes and garbage, police protection and ample space for outdoor recreation.

Housing is adequate

Housing facilities are adequate to meet the needs of all. There are dwellings here which will meet the needs of almost every family. Big six room houses with all modern conveniences including front porches and rear yards. They rent as low as $25 per month, and are comparable in type to those in the larger cities renting for nearly twice the amount.

You're a part of the community

If you live in Bristol you are a part of the community. You are not lost in the crowds of a great city where often times your next door neighbor doesn't know you. Live in Bristol and participate in its affairs and you will find life much more worth the living.

HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN TO SCRIMMAGE TODAY

(By T. M. Juno)

Coach Townsend will hold his first scrimmage of the season on the high school field this afternoon.

The rough work-out will probably convince the coach as to whom will be his starting line-up when the referee blows his whistle to start the Bristol-Newtown annual game this Friday.

Coach Townsend, with his aides, Paul Brown, former full-back of Stetson University, Florida, and Gene Spadacino, last year's quarter-back and captain, have had a hard job on their hands in developing players. The players who reported for the team this fall, with the exception of five, are inexperienced.

The manager of the team, William Wisner, has arranged a tentative schedule of twelve games, six of them, including Doylestown High, are to be played at home.

Shoot Monkey Guilty
Of Robbing Hennerly

The monkey measures about 18 inches long and weighs two pounds. Its long tail was in the form of rings. The two small ears were covered with patches of grey and its coat was a mottled black. The monkey was given to the Bensalem High School for study.

No idea as to where the animal came from is had by the local residents. It is thought that perhaps it had escaped from a circus train passing through the section and has been living in a wild state, getting its own food as best it could.

KONJOLA HELPED HER TO HAVE GLORIOUS HEALTH

Case That Resisted Every Treatment Tried Yielded To This New and Different Medicine

MRS. ELLIE BACHMAN

"I was troubled with constipation, which fairly saturated my system with poisons," said Mrs. Ellie Bachman, 923 Mulberry street, Reading, Pa. "Then my kidneys failed to function properly, and then real misery and suffering began. Indigestion added to my woes and I was sick and miserable all over. I suffered from gas and bloating and my legs began to swell at the knees. My sleep was broken several times during the night because of weak kidneys.

"A neighbor recommended Konjola and I decided to give it a trial. Day by day I could note improvement, and at the end of three weeks I was practically normal in every way. But I am going on with the treatment and at the rate I am going now, in two more weeks I shall have back the complete and glorious health I never expected to enjoy again. Konjola is surely the master medicine and I endorse it to all who suffer as I did."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

Suppose It Were Yours!

Before you buy fire insurance try to imagine that you have just had a fire. Picture to yourself the service you would get at the hands of your insurance agent and your insurance company.

Would your agent be quick to help you?
Would the company give you a prompt and equitable adjustment? Would you be fairly and courteously treated?

Build, Live in the Bloomsdale Estate

There are still good lots available, but fewer every day. Bloomsdale Estate is growing up. Improvements are installed. Better get in
now. We have a few fine locations left, and will build immediately on a reasonable payment basis.

... on the floor it's TIME!

... in a cigarette it's TASTE!

"Hit THE NAIL on the head" ... cut out the frills, give smokers the one thing they want—and sales will take care of themselves.

At least, that's the Chesterfield platform. The one thing smokers want is good taste—and that's the one thing we're interested in giving them—

"TASTE above everything"

MILD ... and yet
THEY SATISFY
